AT DAVIDSON COMMENCEMENT

DR. STRICKLER'S ABLE ADDRESS.

Wise Words of the Rev. Egbert Smith on a Practical Subject.

At the exercises Thursday morning, after a most fervent and impressive prayer by Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, of Greensboro, invoking God's blessings on the students, the institution, and the trustees, Dr. Shearer introduced Rev. Dr. Strickler, of Atlanta, Ga., to deliver the annual address before the Philanthropic and Fumenean Societies. He took for his subject, "The Conditions of Success in Life."

He divided his discourse into six parts.

To obtain success, first, we must resolve to do our best in training all our powers, mental, physical, in every pursuit in which we engage.

Second—The wise choice of a pursuit.

Third—After we have made a right choice abide in it and devote to it all our powers.

Fourth—After having chosen a pursuit we must master it.

Fifth—Character.

Sixth—Take as your guide the Bible.

We regret that space will not allow us to do justice to this most able and timely address.

The alumni address was delivered by Rev. Egbert W. Smith, of Greensboro, N. C., who took as his subject "Patriotism and Politics."

He divided patriotism into two kinds: First, that to protect the fatherland from eternal dangers; Second, the one which looked after her inner welfare. The one seeks to protect; the other to develop and improve. The supply of the first kind is ludicrously in excess of the demand while the demand for the second is appallingly in excess of the supply.

Ignorance is a great peril to Democracy but indolence is the greatest evil it encounters. Indolence among the cultured and clear-headed educated men. This class has been the salt of the republic. "If it lose its savor where withal shall it be salted." Every educated man ought to be a practical politician, not in the present slang sense but every high-minded and clear-headed man should be active in politics so far as his profession admits. The vulgarity of politics is not in the politics but in the politician.

In the field of American politics is being fought the greatest problem in history, that of self-government. Humanity's last crowning effort is the Anglo-Saxon race, and the last crowning effort of the Anglo-Saxon race is the American people. There are four channels of influence through which every educated man ought to send a good influence. Polls, primaries, press and platform. The primary makes the nomination, the nomination the representative, and the representative the country. It is the centre of political reform. By the time the election day has come the field of choice has narrowed down to two candidates which may give an honest man a pang to vote for. Fools select your rulers; wise men elect them. Every educated man ought to be an independent. No man should tie his brains to the wheels of a party machine. To be a patriot rather than a blind partisan requires courage of the Spartan type. "Let us love our country above our party."

The honorary degrees of Doctor of Divinity were conferred on the following: Rev. J. H. Boyd, of Charlotte; Rev. R. F. Campbell, of Asheville; Rev. T. R. Sampson, of Asheville; and Rev. Egbert W. Smith, of Greensboro.

Among the distribution of six society medals, Mr. Geo. M. Matthews, of Clinton, was the successful contestant for the declaimer's medal.

The attendance upon the graduating class Friday morning was estimated to be between three and four thousand. The immense college chapel was completely filled and scores had to stand during the entire exercises.

This has been a successful year for Davidson and its many friends and alumni predict for it a bright future.

CORRUPTION FUNDS FOR BOTH OLD PARTIES.

(Kinston Free Press.)

Mr. Havemeyer, president of the sugar trust, was recently before the Senate investigating committee. Among many questions he was asked "Why should the American Sugar Refining Company contribute to either of the political parties of New York?" He replied: "We have large interests in that state, and we want police and fire protection. Every individual and corporation and firm, trust or whatever you call it, do these things, and we do them." He was then asked: "And you contribute to both parties with the expectation of whatever party succeeds your interests will be guarded?" The reply was: "We have a good deal of protection for our contribution."

That confession, boldly made, speaks volumes. It is a terrible state of affairs when enough senators can be bribed to see that the interests of trusts are guarded, at the expense of the public. Perhaps men with more honesty would be senators were elected by a direct vote of the people.

PEOPLE'S PARTY IN NASH.

The Ex. Com. Call Convention and Hear Speeches—The Reform Gaining Recruits.

The People's Party Ex. Com. of Nash county met pursuant to its adjournment with a full attendance from all the townships.

After adjournment of the Ex. Com. a large crowd assembled to hear addresses from some converts from the democratic party until the arrival of Capt. W. H. Kitchin, who had promised to address the meeting.

Mr. B. F. Taylor, a young attorney of Nashville, in a short but forcible speech, renounced his allegiance to the democratic party which he had heretofore espoused, for the simple reason that it had failed to secure to the people the relief it had promised them if put in full control of the government, and as an advocate of that party in the last campaign he had made similar pledges which he had no hopes to see redeemed by that party. Mr. Taylor spoke earnestly and feelingly in the pointed remarks made and alligned himself in the future with to the People's party as the only security for popular liberty and protection.

He was warmly cheered and congratulated upon his strong address.

There was much enthusiasm in the people in the Populist cause at the assemblage in Nashville to-day, and we do not intend to allow one vote be thrown out this time, nor will we submit to vote by the dim luminary of the Standard Oil Company, thus paying tribute to one of the largest monopolies and trusts in the country in a dark shed to exclusion of the light of the brightest of all lamps which God was extending us without money and without price.

This was done, too, in direct violation of the election law of North Carolina, which says the election shall be held by sun light, (Section 2685 "until sunset") under direction of —— officers sworn to comply with said law. The poll there was all right to be counted in for the democrats, but in other places where the Populists had majorities, the watch of one the candidates said the "sun was down before election closed a few minutes by his time." There Populists must lose, must be counted out, as it was "gainst the law." "O, consistency thou art a jewel indeed!"

At the recent election of county commissioners two Populists were ousted to make room for two rich democrats. As they are good business men and gentlemen, hope the county will not lose any thing by their election.

THE A. AND M. COMMENCEMENT.

The people of Raleigh were by no means pleased with Congressman Hatch's failure to keep his appointment to address the college. F. H. Busbee, Esq., of the city, delivered the address to the students in his stead, and made it in excellent taste.

President Holliday, who is a very earnest man, made some remarks in which he spoke of the work of the college and the stand it is taking. He said that among the new colleges it was foremost

The graduates were Charles E. Corfening, David Cox, Jr., R. D. Patterson, Charles Pearson, Z. G. Rogers, J. H. Saunders, B. F. Walton, and J. M. Wilson. Each graduate delivered an address.

Governor Carr presented the prizes to the winners. O. G. Kennedy was awarded a gold medal for excellence in agriculture; C. E. Clark and R. F. Buffalo first and second prizes for the largest amount of money earned by work on the college farm; E. J. Ingram, of the freshman class, won the medal for the best essay on agriculture; W. C. Jackson of the sophomore class won the medal for the best essay on horticulture; A. H. Prince, of the junior class, got the medal for the best essay, the latter medal being the gift of the State Agricultural Society.

Distinctions were awarded as follows: First in mechanics, Charles Pearson; second, Z. G. Rogers; first in agriculture, B. F. Walton; second, R. D. Patterson.

The uniforms of the boys was made of cloth which was manufactured in Salem.

Lieutenant Henderson, of the Navy, took charge of the students to drill them until late in the fall.

The exhibition drill was an exceedingly creditable showing. At evening an entertainment was given, at which refreshments were served, and the attendance was very large.

ANOTHER JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRAT LEAVES THE MACHINE.

EDITOR CAUCASIAN:—In consideration of the great dissatisfaction and uncertainty of purpose of the Democratic party both State and National, and in consideration that the Democratic party has violated all the pledges of its platform, and seeing that the leaders of the Democratic party are not in sympathy with the people in their distress and need, and knowing the fact that the present administration, both State and National are not in keeping with the Democratic platform of 1892 (which no Democrat can deny,) I therefore feel no longer bound by partyties, and in the future I shall be independent in politics. I am a Democrat of the Jeffersonian type,—and in the future I shall ally my feble efforts with the People party.

THE BOSSES CAUCUS

And Appoint a Board of County Commissions.

Granthams, N. C., June 19, '94.
Mr. Editor, Dear Sir:

I see in a recent issue of the Argus, once a great Alliance Journal, commenting on the newly elected board of county commissioners, says they are all now democrats, as they should be. Now sir it is a well known fact that two-thirds or more of the tax-payers of this county belong to the People and Republican parties, and the other one-third or less belong to the Demo-Radical party, and as a matter of course, and according to their principle this one-third party should select, control and misrepresent the entire voting population of the county! Hence the meeting of the BOSSES at the Mayor's office, with Grantham's little pill peddler in the chair, two hours prior to the regular meeting of board of Justice of the Peace! Oh no, nothing wrong in that meeting, the BOSSES just met over there to APPOINT a board of commissioners, nothing more, nor nothing less!

Perhaps after the first of December the county printing will change office, whereby the tax-payers will not have to pay but two hundred dollars for county printing as 'tis now they don't have to pay but about one hundred dollars. Well now the official organ of the Alliance, the Headlight, in its comments on the new board, says the recent political affiliations of M. E. Cox and J. J. Ivey caused their defeat. Well, report says Mr. Ivey voted two years ago with the People's party. Seems this was a terrible crime. I have never heard any thing of Mr. Ivey, only he was a high-toned gentleman from a good family, and good blood, and has performed the duties of county commissioner conscienciously and creditably. Now, as to Mr. M. E. Cox, I can truthfully say that he voted with the Demo-Radical party two years ago, though he has always been a Democrat, and if he has affiliated with any party since the last election, I am not aware of it. Now don't understand me to be offering any condolence to the defeated commissioners, for they are not lamenting at all; besides they are financially independent to any of the bosses and ballot box stuffers of the Demo-Radical party. You may and no doubt will hear something more that will amuse you when the campaign fully opens.

Respectfully,
A. O. B.

HON. HARRY SKINNER AT PITTSBORO.

We make the following extract from a report of Col. Skinner's speech at Pittsboro:

"He dwelt mostly on the financial question, saying that while the other principles advocated by People's party were right and proper, the money question was most important. He showed up the goldbug in true style and said it was a menace to American institutions, and an enemy to American freedom. He explained the evil results of a single gold standard by showing that the total debt of the world is eighteen billion dollars, while there is only three billion dollars of gold, hence only one fifth enough gold in the world to pay the indebtedness, and that trade and commerce would be paralyzed under such conditions.

"He denounced in severe terms the ballot box stuffer and the election frauds. He stated that the democratic party had changed while he was fighting for the same principles that he fought for in the Tilden campaign of 1876. He urged all those of the two old parties who were in accord with us on the financial question to join the People's party, and showed the utter folly of ever hoping to get relief through either democratic or republican legislation, as both were in the clutches of Wall street and England. He further stated that there was no room for the goldbug in the Populist party. We will not do Col. Skinner the injustice of any further attempt of a synopsis of his speech, to appreciate him you must hear him. Suffice it to say that it was a strong speech, and even some Reformers were agreeably surprised at the strong advocate we have in him, for by common consent it was one of the best, if not the very best political speech delivered here since the war.

A Populist.
Pittsboro, N. C., June 6, '94.

HON. W. F. STROUD FOR CONGRESS IN THE FOURTH DISTRICT.

(Special Cor. to THE CAUCASIAN.]

Realizing the fact that what we need to make a good fight this fall is to put good men in the field, I know of no man who can show up a better and cleaner record than Buck Stroud. Neither can we find a man who will poll a larger vote. I learn from reliable authority that the western part of the district is solid for him. Now why not all pull together and make sure of the fight. What we want is a man who will be elected. Certainly we cannot find a man who we are under more obligations to as a party. Without a doubt he has done more for the reform movement than any other man in the district who we would think of nominating. His past fight is before you; who could have done better? Now friends, let us make a good and sure fight. Give us Stroud for Congress. Mr. Stroud is a good talker and can tell the facts—that is all we need. Let the people know what they are.

FRED. H. WILLIAMS.
Rocky Mount, N. C.,

HON. TOM WATSON

GIVES MORE FACTS AND FIGURES FROM THE OFFICIAL RECORD.

Let the People Know How Their Money is Spent, What it Costs You For Parks and Public Grounds.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, I find that it cost you seventy-four thousand dollars to maintain and beautify the parks in Washington City during that year.

Besides this sum you spent upwards of $12,000 to take care of the Washington monument.

It seems incredible that it should cost you an average of twelve thousand dollars per year to preserve one marble monument and to operate an elevator in it, but such is the literal fact.

To give you some idea of the items which require this expenditure I will state the details, from the account of August 5, 1892:

For ordinary care of LaFayette Square, $1,000; of Franklin Square, $1,000; of Monument Grounds, $2,500; for improvement of "Reservation No. 17," $5,000; for post-and-chain fences, $1,000; for manure, $5,000; for painting the lodges of watchmen, fences, lamps, etc., $750; for the purchase of seats, $1,000; for tools, $2,000; for trees, plants, lime, labels, etc., $2,000; for removing snow and ice, $1,200; for lower pots, baskets, etc., $1,000; for the care and construction of fountains, $1,500, for the improvement of the Smithsonian Grounds, $5,000; for Judiciary Square and the Pension Building Grounds, $3,000; for other reservations and grounds, including wages of watchmen, etc., $12,000; then comes the Washington monument, its custodian, engineers, firemen, conductor for elevator, its day watchmen and night watchmen, its fuel, lights, heating apparatus, repairs to engine, etc., etc., costing you for twelve months, the extravagant sum of eleven thousand, five hundred and twenty dollars.

A few sight-seers who can go to Washington and take a ride on the elevator to the top of the Washington monument, enjoy this luxury very much indeed, but the great mass of the tax-payers derive no benefit from it whatever. If every visitor was charged twenty-five cents for the elevator privilege, this monument would pay its own way. There is no more sense in taxing 65,000,000 people to afford a free ride to the favored few who visit Washington than there would be in taxing a thousand farmers to pay for a free railroad trip for one.

The list of employees to look after this one monument, and to operate the elevator, is as follows:

One "custodian" at $100 per month; engineer, $85 per month; assistant engineer, $60 per month; fireman, $50 per month, assistant fireman, $45; conductor, $75; one attendant on floor, $60; ditto on top floor, $60; three day and night watchmen at $60 each—in all, $8,500 in salaries. Then comes the fuel, repairs, etc., at $3,000. Costly monument.

The Botanic Garden is where they cultivate flowers and ornamental plants and shrubs.

For the year 1892-3, you paid $5,000 for certain repairs to the buildings.

The manure for the flowers, the tools, the fuel and the new plants purchased cost you $5,000.

The salaries of the men who take care of the establisment cost you $13,893.

Add up these items and you will see that you were good enough to supply the favored few with flowers at the expense of nearly twenty-four thousand dollars for that one year.

Add to this sum $3,000 for improvements to the buildings and grounds and $40,000 for Botanical "Investigations and Experiments" and you will have a grand total of nearly sixty-seven thousand dollars of your taxes spent in Washington for flowers during one fiscal year.

The Smithsonian Institution is the National Museum in which you keep specimens of snakes, lizards, buzzards, turkeys, terrapins, aligators, and various other dead animals, and various other curiosities.

For the fiscal year 1892—3 you spent the following sums upon your appetite for curiosities:

For salaries, and for specimens to be exhibited - -	$132,500
For glass cases to put the curiosities in, and for some more salaries - -	10,000
For heating, lighting, etc. - - - - - - -	11,000
For stamps and postal cards	500
For printing the "Proceeding" of this Institution - - - -	12,000

In connection with this Institution you maintain a Zoological Garden wherein you keep a number of live animals—something of a stationary menagerie.

This costs you $25,000 per year.

In the same connection you maintain at an expense of $9,000 per year an "Artrophysical Observatory."

I wanted to tell you what "Artrophysical" means but I am not able to do it. The Webster's Unabridged Dictionary which I have just consulted does not contain the word. The date of my edition is 1873.

I guess the word has been invented since that time just for the purpose of getting your $9,000 per year.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

[The following excellent report of the Wake Forest Commencement was received last week after we had condensed a report from the daily press. ED. CAUCASIAN.]

The exercises of the week have been a fitting close for the work of a very successful and satisfactory session of this great Institution.

Throughout the entire session the deportment of the student body has been exceptionally good and the work in all the departments through and well sustained.

MONDAY NIGHT.

This is the occasion of the class exercises. The senior class numbers 28, representing New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, South Carolina, and North Carolina. The class oration was delivered by Mr. J. D. Robertson, the poem was read by Mr. R. F. Beasley, the history by Mr. R. W. Haywood, and the prophecy by Mr. J. E. Yates. The exercises were greatly enjoyed by the largest audience that ever greeted a class on such an occasion.

TUESDAY.

At nine a. m. the Trustees met in their annual meeting. In the history of the college the attendance of the Trustees was never so large, all except three of the members being present. At 8 p. m. the alumni address was delivered by Hon. E. B. Jones, a prominent lawyer of Winston and an influential member of the last legislature, his subject being "The Boy of the Old Field School Shapes our Destiny and Makes Our History."

At the conclusion of the address the annual meeting of the alumni association was held. Prof. W. L. Poteat of the Chair of Natural History, was elected as the next Alumni Orator and other routine business was transacted.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The crowd grows larger. The spacious campus is thronged with beautiful women and handsome men. Under the great oaks in front of the college buildings the famous Richmond Band discourses sweet music to the multitudes gathered from every part of the State to talk over the scenes of their college life and renew their allegiance to their alma mater.

At 11 a. m. the Literary address was delivered by Rev. F. C. McConnell, D. D., of Lynchburg, Va. His subject was "No other Man has His Hand on Your Goal." An orator of wonderful power, he charmed the great audience and fully justified the reputation, already made, of being one of the most eloquent men in the South.

At 8 p. m. the Baccalaureate sermon was preached by Rev. E. M. Poteat, of New Haven, Conn. Taking as his theme "Christ the only True Foundation," he showed that Christ must be the basis of all real individual, social and national growth and achievement. Mr. Potent is an Alumnus of Wake Forest and the college may well be proud of the reputation he is making as a profound thinker and eloquent preacher.

THURSDAY.

This is Commencement day proper. Every train is crowded. The general opinion is that no such crowds ever attended Wake Forest Commencement before.

At 11 a. m. seven members of the graduating class delivered orations.

The Salutatory, the second highest honor, was delivered by Mr. W. L. Foushee, of Roxboro, N. C. Out of a possible grade of 100 Mr. Foushee has made during his course the exceptional average of 98.52. The orations were delivered as follows:

Mr. M. O. Carpenter, of Lincoln county, N. C., subject, "Shifting."

Mr. R. L. Freeman, of South Carolina, subject, "The South Carolina Dispensary Law."

Mr. R. F. Beasley, of Monroe, N. C., subject, "Wooing Sirens."

Mr. J. E. Yates, of Chatham Co., N. C., subject, "The Parliament of Religions."

Mr. J. D. Robertson, of Iredell Co., N. C., subject, "Vance, the N. C. Patriot."

The Valedictory address, the highest honor, was won and delivered by Mr. R. W. Haywood, of Jones Co. His average grade has been 98.81 out of a possible 100.

At the conclusion of the orations the Baccalaureate address was delivered by President Taylor who took as his subject the "Three Keys to Success—Self-control, Self-reliance, and Self-respect."

At night the annual concert was given by the band and afterwards the usual reception was given by the Literary Societies in their elegant halls. These Societies are the pride of the Institution. They are not hampered by secret fraternities for the Trustees have always very wisely forbidden the existence of such fraternities among the students.

The outlook for new students is bright. A system of waterworks will be added before the beginning of the next session and other needed improvements will be made. The summer Law School will open on July 3rd.

In all the history of the College it has never had a more pleasant or successful Commencement than the one just ended. It may interest some of the readers of THE CAUCASIAN to know that Mr. W. P. Exum, Jr., son of Dr. W. P. Exum, is one of the leading members of the Sophomore class, and will be one of the honor men in the class of '96.

TEACHERS IN SESSION.

THE ANNUAL MEETING AT MOREHEAD CITY.

Who is There and What the Assembly is Doing.

[From The CAUCASIAN's Special Correspondent.]

ATLANTIC HOTEL, MOREHEAD CITY, N. C., June 25.—The eleventh annual session of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly was opened Wednesday, June 20th, with Miss Rachfield Brookfield, of Newbern, one of the Vice Presidents, in the chair; the President of the Assembly, Prof. F. P. Hobgood, of Oxford, being detained at home on account of sickness in his family.

Wednesday afternoon, the members of the Assembly accepted the invitation of the boatmen of Morehead City and Beaufort to a complimentary sail.

At 8:30 Wednesday evening the opening address of the Assembly was delivered by Henry Blount, editor of the Wilson Mirror. His theme was "The surmounting of difficulties and the reward of faithful perseverance." He was greeted with a large audience, that felt encouraged by his words. It was a good speech, and well delivered.

President Taylor, of Wake Forest College, was not present Thursday morning to read a paper on "What you owe to your boys," as the programme announced. But Dr. James Atkins, President of Asheville Female College, gave an excellent address on "What you owe to your girls." Dr. Atkins spoke without manuscript, and made a favorable impression. He plead for an equal education of girls with boys. Girls do not want the same kind of training as boys, to study the same subjects. For the sexes are different, physically and mentally. They have different work to do in the world. But the girls are the intellectual equals of the boys, and their education should extend as far. We want to make not men of our girls, but the best kind of women. Woman's highest position is that of wife and mother.

According to the custom of the Assembly after the reading of a paper or delivery of an address on the morning's programme, the subject was open for general discussion. The short, animated speeches that followed Dr. Atkins, can hardly be called a discussion, for they all agreed in endorsing what had been said. Remarks were made by Dr. R. H. Lewis, Kinston; Capt. C. F. Siler, Holly Sprinfs; Mr. J. M. Weatherby, High Point; Prof. Dred Peacock, Greensboro Female College; and Mr. Henry Blount.

The Assembly does not meet in the afternoon, but gives the members opportunity to go sailing, surf-bathing, or to take other recreation.

On the programme for Thursday evening Mr. C. W. Barden, editor of the School Bulletion, Syracuse, N. Y., was announced for an "Address." He was not present. Instead, Mr. Henry Blount delighted a large audience with recitations from various dramas, and a negro minstrel farce. In this Mr. Blount is a genius. His representations of the characters of a dialogue are perfect, and he is equally good in tragedy and in comedy.

The discussions of Friday morning were the first that could be of practical value to school teachers. There were about fifty-five present. Supt. E. P. Moses, of Raleigh, read a paper on "Primary Reading." He advocated teaching beginners to learn words by the phonic method, that is, by teaching them the sounds—not the names—of the letters. First children should be taught to pronounce correctly. Many children, when they enter school, do not. It is absurd to teach them to spell words they cannot utter. Before teaching them to recognize printed words, teach them to spell simple words by calling the elementary sounds of the words—not by naming the letters. Having thus learned that a word is not a smple sound, but is composed of two, three, or more parts, teach the children the letters, as the characters representing these sounds.

Mr. Moses' argument for the value of phonic teaching was convincing. It will save time in learning to read. It is the rational way to teach reading. This is the method in use in European schools. He admitted that the English is the most irregular of Indo-European tongues. But no language is regular, and ninety per cent. of English words are regular in their spelling, and may be learned by sound. Then teach them this way, and the remaining ten per cent. as exceptions, memorizing each word without rule, as all are now learned. The speaker quoted eminent authorities in support of his position. English can be taught thus, for in some schools it is taught by the phonic method. The paper was scholarly, the result of years of study upon this subject, and long in investigation. Mr. Moses' style is direct and earnest. The Secretary announced that this paper would be published. Every teacher of young children should read it.

"Primary Arithmetic" by Miss Kate McKinnon of St. Mary's School, Raleigh, was the next subject on the programme. This was omitted, owing to the absence of the speaker.

Miss Eliza Pool, Principal of the Murphy Building of the Raleigh City Schools, read a paper on "Spelling." She gave some good suggestions to teachers. Her paper also exposed the inconsistencies of orthodox English spelling, and was a strong argument for the spelling reform, that is advocated by the philological societies of England and America. At the close of this reading, discussion was participated in by Messrs. E. G. Harrell, Raleigh; L. D. Howell, Goldsboro; C. F. Siler, Holly Sprinfs; E. E. Smith, Atlanta, Ga; E. P. Moses, Raleigh; Dr. R. H. Lewis, Kinston; E. E. Britton, Rutherfordton.

Supt. C. N. Toms, Durham, introduced a resolution stating that the N. C. Teachers' Assembly endorses spelling reform, and that a copy of the resolution be sent to the Secretary of the American Philological Society.

Dr. J. M. Rice, of Boston, Mass., was on the programme for Friday evening, subject "Scientific Teaching." Dr. Rice is the author of the articles that appeared in the Forum about a year ago criticising the school system of certain American cities. He, however, failed to come to Morehead City, and President Hobgood, who had arrived the day before, delivered the delayed inaugural address. His subject was "The life, work, and character of Thomas Arnold, Head Master of Rugby School." Mr. Hobgood was fortunate in the selection of a subject, and happy in its presentation.

Saturday morning the Assembly hall was filled to hear the inter-collegiate debate for a gold medal, offered by the Assembly. The subject was: "Resolved that Great men make circumstances, and circumstances do not make great men." There were six speakers, two each from Trinity, Wake Forest, and the Agricultural and Mechanical College. The debate was creditable to the young men, and enjoyed by the audience. The medal was won by a representative of Trinity College, Mr. Plummer Stewart, of

A PLOT TO BLOW UP THE CAPITOL--A GOLDBUG LIE.

The goldbug anarchists have hatched a blood and thunder story about a great plot to blow up the U. S. Capitol. This canard was sent out by the monopolists through their mouth-piece the "Press Dispatches." The story has been published in every old party paper in America. They have tried to make it appear that those in the alleged plot were members of the People's party. The object of this is very plain. The goldbugs know that if the people voted their convictions and for their own interests that they will repudiate the Democratic and Republican parties and vote the People's party ticket. They have no argument with which they can fool the people again. So they are now trying to frighten the people by attempting to make it appear that the success of the People's party means the success of anarchy.

It would not surprise us if the goldbugs were to hire some one to explode some dynamite about the Capitol, and then through the Press Dispatches declare that the man belonged to the People's party.

The machiae in North Carolina can not cry "negro in the wood pile" any longer, in as much as all the negro counties have gone democratic, so they are glad to cry anarchy and dynamite.

But this goldbug plot to frighten the people will not work. The People's party is composed of the most conservative elements of the old parties. It is composed of men who want the present wrongs righted by due process of legislation and execution of law. The old party machines are to-day playing the part of anarchists by refusing to observe and execute laws, and playing the part of traitors and tyrannists by passing laws in the interests of the few against the interests of the many.

STATE CONVENTION AUG. 1ST.

The State Executive Committee of the People's party was in session in Raleigh on Wednesday of last week.

The State convention was called to meet in Raleigh on Weddesday, Aug. 1st.

A resolution was passed expressing the sense of the committee that all Congressional, Judicial, Senatorial, and County conventions should be deferred till after the State convention.

The committee also defined who was eligible to participate in People's party primaries in the following language:

All who are opposed to the present financial system of our government, who are in favor of the free coinage of both silver and gold at the legal ratio of 16 to 1; who favor a further increase of our legal tender currency, without the intervention of banking corporations; who favor a graduated income tax and further necessary legislation to reduce and equalize taxation and who are opposed to the present machine election methods in North Carolina by which many of our citizens are disfranchised, and the will of the people perverted by the dishonest action of certain election officers; who are in favor of a more economic administration of our government, county, State and National; who are opposed to having the Executive and Legislative branches of our government dominated and controlled by trusts, combines and monopolies, and who are willing to cooperate with the People's party to secure these reforms, are invited to participate in all People's party primaries and conventions.

See in another column the People's party plan of organization."

WHO WILL RISE TO THE EMERGENCY?

It takes both of the old parties to make hard times. Crush either one and let the fight come straight between the other and the People's party and the victory is won. Then the issues will be squarely drawn and the people can no longer be fooled. Then every patriot will get into the People's party and every monopolist and their henchmen will get into the other old party (either Democratic or Republican). Then the People's party will poll twice as many votes as the old party, in spite of their money and power. If there are more patriots in the Republican party than in the Democratic party then let them make the move. Let them leave that party and let it go to the wall, let the goldbugs in it go to the democratic party. If this is done then the best men in the democratic party will also come to the People's party, and this will make an overwhelming victory for the people. One of the old parties must be crushed, and it must be done by the good men in it. Who will make the move?

DOES THE BIBLICAL RECORDER MEAN WHAT IT SAYS?

The Biblical Recorder in its last issue says editorially:

"Those who look to legislation for relief may as well cease looking. We have never read of a time in the history of this or other countries when it was possible for legislation to bring relief."

If it is imposible for legislation to give relief, then it is impossible for the people to be oppressed by legislation. Does the Recorder mean to say that the people are not to-day oppressed by bad, unwise, and unpatriotic laws?

Further on in the same article the editor trying to make its readers satisfied with present conditions says:

"Prosperity depends not so much on conditions as upon the adjustment of a country to conditions."

We are to understand from the above that the Recorder's remedy for hard times is to adjust yourself to hard times—that is to live hard and be contended to do so.

This is about what we would have expected to have found in the columns of an old party organ, but we are surprised to see the Recorder publish such stuff. We can hardly believe that the editor wrote the above. He must have been away and the printers' devil been in charge.

SEND WISE MEN TO STATE CONVENTIONS.

Those counties which cannot conveniently hold their conventions as early as July 4th,will be able to hold them later. The State convention is called to meet Aug 1st, so a county could hold its convention as late as the last week in July, if it so desires.

Each county should send its most conservative men to the State convention. Wise counsel rather than speech-making is needed. If the State convention takes the proper action, the People's party will surely win in the coming fight.

NOW YOU HAVE IT.

"A tremendous pressure is daily made on Col. E. D. Hall to again get up a Confederate Veterans' encampment at Wrightsville Sound this summer, not only by the old soldiers whose comfort and pleasure is deeply concerned but by prominent statesmen in behalf of the politics of the State. They seemed thoroughly satisfied that the last encampment saved the democracy of the State and urge on Col. Hall to again use his effort in behalf of the old party."—Wilmington Messenger June 12th.

We have suspected that these encampments were held more for the purpose of aiding the democratic party than for any geniune sense of love for the gallant old soldiers. But we can not believe that the noble men who were honest in their convictions of the justice of the cause for which they fought will NOW surrender and sacrifice their convictions respecting the righteousness of the political battle soon to be fought. Our contemporary "lets the cat out of the bag," and the effort to have an encampment this year shows that the promoters of the scheme are not prompted by any sincere love for the comfort and well-being of the veterans of the State, but solely to save the "grand old party." The political tricksters will not use these honest old veterans to boost them and a recreant party into power again.

PEOPLE'S PARTY MEETING IN CHOWAN.

Speeches Made by J. H. Parker, W. B. Felton, Editor Babbs and Theo White.

Edenton, N. C., June 18, '94.

EDITOR CAUCASIAN:

Saturday, June 16th, was a gala day for the Populists of Chowan county. Pursuant to a call of many citizens the people at an early hour began to assemble at Small's Cross Roads and by 11 o'clock quite an audience had arrived. They were called together by W. J. Forehand, a sterling Populist, who explained the object of the meeting. Township executive committees were organized, also the county executive committee with that talented and fearless young man, W. B. Felton, as chairman thereof.

Editor Babb, of Hertford, gave a short speech, after which we adjourned to partake of a sumptuous dinner which had been prepared upon the grounds. Immediately on reassembling after dinner, Mr. J. H Parker, the member of the House of Representatives of our last General Assembly, from Perquimans county, was called out and responded in a very interesting and instructive speech. He discussed the political issues of the day, showing how faithless the two old parties had been to the people and the great necessity of a new party.

Mr. Parker made a most excellent speech and impressed us as a man of considerable ability. Bro. John Brady, of Gates county, was next called upon who spoke principally upon the financial question.

Next came Hon. Theo White, of Perquimans county, who made a vigorous speech on general issues.

We judge from the present outlook that he will be nominated and elected to the Senate branch of the next Legislature of North Carolina from this Senatorial district.

W. B. Felton was then called upon and made a short speech, thanking the people for their presence and attention and urged them to stand as one solid phalanx for the People's party until the close of the polls on the day of election next November.

Respectfully,

CHOWAN.

OLD PARTY ORGANS GETTING CONVERTED.

The News-Observer-Chronicle in its issue of last Saturday said that it was now converted to the anti-option bill. We are glad to see this. We hope that it will after awhile get its eyes open further.

When the editor of THE CAUCASIAN several years ago was advocating an anti-option bill, an income tax, a railroad commission, and a better financial system, the N.-O.-C. (then News and Observer) tried to ridicule our position and tried to answer our arguments with abuse. Day after day that paper wrote editorials claiming that an anti-option bill would hurt the farmers; day after day it published editorials trying to show that a Railroad commission would be against the best interests of the State; day after day more editorials were written saying that the tariff was the greatest issue before the American people and that our present financial system was the best the world ever saw. The Alliance has continued to fight for these and other reforms (while every old party organ was opposing them) till the people are now so well informed as to the justness of and the necessity for these reforms that these old monopoly organs are forced to change their position. During this time, which side has been the true friend of the people?

NEXT SATURDAY

Let some friend of THE CAUCASIAN get us a club of subscribers at every township primary in the State.

NEXT WEDNESDAY

Let a half a dozen men get up clubs at every county convention in the State. The campaign will be interesting. There is much at stake in this fight. Every voter should see THE CAUCASIAN. Send us a club of five subscribers at 50 cents each and we will make you a present of Dunning's Campaign Book.

The Bessemer City Messenger, published at Bessemer City, N. C., by Mr. J. A. Smith, has declared for the People's party. Mr. Smith commenced in the world as a poor man and has been a very successful business man. But his own experience has taught him that business men are suffering as much from bad legislation as farmers. He believes that the remedy lies in the demands of the People's party.

J. V. Lewis, chairman of the Democratic executive committee of his county in Ohio, has declared for the People's party. He lives in Coxey's district.

The Hatch anti-option bill has passed the House by a vote of 150 to 87.

SADI CARNOT SLAIN.

The French President Stabbed by a Fanatic.

Sadi Carnot, President of the French Republic, was stabbed with a dagger last Saturday in Lyons by Cesare Giovanni Santo. an Italian, and died in three hours. The assassin was promptly arrested. The President had just taken a carriage for the Lyons theatre when the anarchist emerged from the crowd, sprang to the step of the vehicle and struck his victim in the side with his fatal weapon. But for police interference the enraged populace would have lynched the assassin on the spot. The Senate and the Chamber of Deputies assembled in Congress at Versailles yesterday for the purpose of electing a new President.

FOR NEW SUBSCRIBERS ONLY.

Our proposition to send THE CAUCASIAN till Jan. 1st, 1895, for fifty cents is good for new subscribers only. If all of our subscribers were to get the paper this long for 50 cents we would lose money. We make this liberal offer to induce those who have never taken the paper to do so now, also to induce our friends to get up clubs and pay the money themselves to get the paper into the hands of more people. Every old subscriber must renew at the regular price. We feel sure that you will all see the justice in this and the necessity for it. There is no money in publishing a paper like THE CAUCASIAN for $1.00 a year. Let every subscriber whose time expires between now and the election renew for a year.

TWO PAPERS FOR 75 CENTS.

THE CAUCASIAN and The National Watchman till after the election for only 75 cents. Order at once. This offer is good for only two weeks.

Go to THE CAUCASIAN office to buy old papers.

TEACHERS IN SESSION.

Union county.

Saturday evening at 8:30, Senator Thos J. Jarvis was to have spoken on the subject: "What does it Profit a State to Educate its Boys and Girls?" A letter was read from him stating that he was unable to leave Washington at this time on account of the present state of the tariff bill, and expressing regret at his absence. The time was occupied by Capt. W. B. Kendrick, of Raleigh, who read his lecture on "The Ups and Downs of Wife Hunting."

The Assembly did not meet on Sunday, though sermons were preached in Assembly hall, in the morning by Rev. Dr. T. W. Crawford, agent for Trinity College endowment fund; and in the evening by Elder P. O. Gold, editor of the Zion's Landmark, Wilson.

Following is the programme for the closing days of the Assembly. It is hoped it will be more of a guide to what will done on these days than has been the programme of the first week.

The teachers of the State seem not to take the usual interest in the Assembly. There are four or five hundred people here, and among them, possibly 75 teachers. Of the teachers, that have not already been named, who are at Morehead, or have been here are:

Prof. Wm. Cain, Chapel Hill; A. Grimsley, Greensboro; County Supt. M. C. Shipman, Brevard; Miss M. M. Carrow; Miss Minnie Slocumb, Goldsboro; Maj. J. W. Yerex, Mr. Geo. B. Hadley, Fayetteville; Misses Loula L. Whitfield, Sallie Davis, Eva Kinsey, LaGrange; County Supt. E. P. Ellington, Madison; Capt. C. B. Denson, Principal Jas. Dinwiddie, Raleigh; Pres. Chas. D. McIver. Prof. J. Y. Joyner, Miss Dixie Lee Bryant, Greensboro; County Supt. S. Wilkinson, Tarboro; Mr. R. G. Kizer, Salisbury.

The official stenographer of the Assembly is Miss Rachel Brown, of Newbern, who is a recent graduate of the State Normal and Industrial School, where she learned the art of shorthand writing.

The cadet cornet band of the Lafayette Military Academy, Fayetteville, is here, and gives concerts twice a day. The boys are in charge of their principal, Maj. Yerex, and show good training.

The weather has been delightful during the week. A good breeze has steadily prevailed, and fishing and surf-bathing have been enjoyed every day.

The Goldsboro Rifles are in camp opposite the Atlantic Hotel. This is a private encampment, as the State encampment of the First Regiment, to which this company belongs, is not held this year. The grounds of the State encampment is three miles up the railroad from Morehead City. The Goldsboro company have named their camp, Camp Bain, in honor of their Captain, T. H Bain, who is widely known among the State Guard, and who as Lieutenant and Captain has been a commissioned officer longer than any other member of the State militia.

Capt. Kitchin Will Speak at Warsaw July 3rd.

Hon. W. H. Kitchin will speak at Warsaw on Tuesday, July 3rd, while there on his way to Clinton where he speaks July 4th.

The People's party primaries will be held Saturday, June 30th, and the county convention to elect delegates at Kenansville, July 4th.

A STATE CAMPAIGN ON CLEVELAND ISSUES.

(Wilmington Messenger.)

The Democrats will begin the fight this year with 14,000 majority against them. In 1892, the Republican and Populist vote united led the Democratic vote by 14,000, or more. Can it be overcome? That depends upon——. The Messenger would like to see a State campaign on State issues as far as the Legislature and other State officers are concerned. But the wise men of the press scouted and scorned the proposition to do this that was first made by the Messenger and strongly indorsed and enforced by the Charlotte Observer. Two or three other papers saw it in the same light. But the press generally that spoke condemned and even applied approbrious epithets to those favoring it Very well. Make the campaign as you please. Try to defend Cleveland's bad appointments, his Hawaiian mismanagement, his murdering of the silver of the Constitution, his Van Alen cleanness, his controlling the Congress thus interfering with the law making power, his wobbling on taxation and favoring protection and being in close fellowship and under the benumbing power of plutocrats and the Money Devil, and then see what a fine time there will be. Indorse Cleveland in the State Convention, and try to defend the Senate sell-out, and then look out for 40,000 majority against the Democracy. Try your State campaigning on Congressional and Cleveland issues and see where you will land the party."

[How can National issues be kept out of the campaign when one of the important duties of the next Legislature will be to elect two U. S. Senators.—ED. THE CAUCASIAN.

GREENSBORO FEMALE COLLEGE.

The sermon to the graduating class was delivered by Bishop Hargrove, taking for his text from Proverbs, "Her price is far above rubies."

His sermon was a magnificent effort and very suitable to the occasion.

The reunion of the Alumni was held on Wednesday evening. The program for the evening included selections of vocal and instrumental music.

On Thursday morning the class day exercises were held. The graduating class was composed of twelve young ladies.

Senator Jarvis delivered the Literary address. His subject was "Today."

Thursday witnessed the close of the Commencement and was the occasion of the annual concert.

On his return from Chapel Hill Commencement Secretary Hoke Smith stopped over and was called on for a speech which was received with much applause.

This was a very successful session and the best Commencement in the history of the College.

LOCAL MINISTERS' CONFERENCE

Quarterly Centennial and Camp Meeting to be Held at Rutherford College, July 19--22.

The North Carolina Local Ministers' Conference was organized at Durham twenty-five years ago, with Brantley York, D. D., as President, and Levi Branson as Secretary. For sixteen years the Conference changed yearly from Kinston in the east to Asheville in the west. Many of the local preachers and lay workers attended from time to time and became interested, so that much good has been done by way of inspiring local and unpaid missionary work.

In 1886 the Conference again met at Rutherford College, built a Tabernacle, and elected that as the place for permanent meeting. In 1890 the College was burned, and the Conference held in 1892 at Raleigh, and in 1893 at Trinity Park, Durham.

It was then decided to hold the twenty-fifth session—the Quarter Centennial—back at the old Tabernacle at Rutherford College, where it will convene July 19-22, 1894.

This was the first, and hence the oldest, Local Preachers' Conference by name, so far as known, anywhere in the world.

The Quarter Centennial is to be celebrated with much enthusiasm, and a great Camp-meeting is to be held after the olden style. Many local preachers are expected, also many traveling preachers and distinguished ministers of other denominations.

The Tabernacle is only one mile out from Connelly Springs depot on the W. N. C. R. R.

HON. J. M. EARLY SPEAKS.

Woodland, Northampton Co, N. C., June 12th, 1894.

EDITOR CAUCASIAN:—On Saturday, the 9th inst., Hon. J. M. Early, of Bertie, spoke at the academy in our town to a large and enthusiastic gathering of our best citizens. He was invited to address the People's Party Club, but the public turned out to hear him, and he held the audience spell-bound for two hours, with forcible and logical argument, which I cannot give in detail, but suffice it to say he hewed to the line, and let the chips fall at will. He discussed county, state and national questions and conditions, and showed the machine up in its true light. We hope to have many speeches just like it in old Northampton this fall. If so, she will show her colors in the coming election. W. T. Griffin.

MR. EDITOR:—Many suggestions have been made in your paper to insure a fair election. Permit me to make the following:

At each voting place let there be a committee of three selected by the P. P. to take the names of each voter. Let it generally be understood that each voter of the P. P. ticket report to this committee as soon as he has deposited his vote and there express his willingness to testify that he voted the P. P. ticket (or part as the case may be) and that the committee note the same opposite each name so voting. If voter cannot read then he shall have a witness that can, and his name shall be recorded as witness also.

By this means we will have all the names of the voters and the number of voters, and the names and the number of all the P P. voters that are willing to swear they voted the Populist ticket. If there is any fraud we have the witnesses to prove it.

A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1892.

These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. They positively contain neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

A GOOD ILLUSTRATION

A gentleman renewing his subscribtion to THE CAUCASIAN writes a very interesting and readable private letter. We take the liberty of making the following extract, which is too good to keep from our readers:

"Did it ever occur to you that, in asking for another chance in which to do some good thing for the people, the democrats are like the Dutchman who owed his friend $5 which he was to send in his next letter? After writing the identical letter in which the money was to have been sent, and before sealing the same, the crafty son of the Fatherland naively added a postscript saying, "Mine frent, I vash going to send dot fife dollar in dis letter, but I done forgot it until it vash too late; but don be uneasy, I vill send it next dime."

The National Ex. Com. of the Farmers' Alliance is in session in Washington city this week.

THE STATE INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The blind and the deaf and dumb of the State are all to-day crowded into one institution in Raleigh. That is, as many of the State's unfortunate as can be crowded into one institution are in Raleigh. That institution is not only too small, but the training of the deaf and dumb is so entirely different from that of the blind that they should be in separate and distinct institutions.

These facts were recognized by the General Assembly of 1891 and a bill was passed providing for the erection of a State institution at Morganton for the deaf and dumb, and that the institution at Raleigh should be used in the future for the blind only.

When in Morganton attending the session of the Press convention, we intended to go out to see the buildings of this long needed school (which are now nearing completion) but want of time deprived us of that pleasure. The buildings are on a beautiful eminence, three-fourths of a mile from Morganton and one mile from the State Hospital, are in plain view of both places.

The building committee before deciding on a plan visited the best institutions of the kind in America and consulted the best known authorities. Prof. E. McK. Goodwin who has charge of the deaf and dumb department of the institution in Raleigh has been elected Superintendent of this institution. He has given many years of study to the training of the deaf and dumb and certainly no one could be more interested in this great work. He says that the deaf and dumb pupils will not only be taught text boods, but that they will be taught trades and professions. This will make those who otherwise would be a tax on the State or their relatives and friends valuable citizens to the State.

They will be taught as carpenters, machinists, plummers, brick layers, printers, painters, agricalturists, and those who show special talents will be taught some of the higher arts.

Prof. Goodwin says that as soon as possible the oral method will be taught and then it will not be a school for the deaf and dumb but for the deaf only. Of course all can not be taught to speak but a large per cent. can.

Prof. Goodwin told us that there were over 600 people in the State who should have such training, while under the old plan at Raleigh but little more than one hundred could be accommodated.

Every North Carolinian has just cause to be proud of the noble charities which this State has established for its unfortunate citizens.

A GOOD IDEA.

We have received a number of letters recently asking at what price we would send 50 or 100 copies of THE CAUCASIAN till after the election. We have answered that we would send 50 copies from July 1st to Nov. 15th for $12 50 or 100 copies for $20 00, provided the person sending the order would certify that the money was raised and paid by persons not included in the club, and that the names included in the list are members of the old parties and can not be gotten to subscribe. Several have accepted this proposition and are now raising the money and preparing their lists. We publish this proposition for the information of our friends all over the State, and suggest that others try the same method of getting the truth before the people who so far have read only one side. We know of no more effective way of advancing the cause of truth and the People's party. We know of no way that the money can be used to do more good.

THE MONEY ORDER SYSTEM EXTENDED, AND FEES REDUCED.

On July the first the fees on money orders will be reduced all over the United States. Those post-offices which have in the past issued post-alnotes, will in the future be limited money orders post-officies. The postal-note will be done away with. Everybody will buy money orders. The fees will be as follows on the new money orders viz:

Up to $2.50	3 cts.
" " $5.00	5 "
" " $10.00	8 "
" " $20.00	10 "
" " $30.00	12 "
" " $40.00	15 "
" " $50.00	18 "
" " $60.00	20 "
" " $75.00	25 "
" " $100.00	30 "

We trust that all of our friends when subscribing for the paper will buy this money order. It cost only five cts. to send $5.00, and besides it is absolutely safe. This money order is as safe as the government itself. It is much safer than registered letters; in short it can't get lost; your letter may be lost but you can get a duplicate order. Do not send stamps when you can possibly avoid it, and never send any stamps larger than two cents. Do not send small checks, as it will cost us ten cts. to get a check for fifty cts. cashed. This new system will be more simple, and much more convenient for the people.

If you are fishing for business THE CAUCASIAN will furnish the bait.

Jerry Simpson Greeted With an Ovation Upon His Re-Appearance in the House.

(Washington Post. 23rd.)

Representative Jerry Simpson made his apperance in the House yesterday afternoon for the first time since his recent dangerous illness. His reception amounted to an ovation. On his desk was a basket of flowers, the gift of Secretary Sterling J. Morson. As soon as he stepped through the main door and proceeded to walk down the aisle a perfect thunder burst of applause began to ring out, which was maintained for several minutes by members on both sides of the floor. He bowed his acknowledgements and took his seat with a face suffused with smiles. A number of Republicans and Democrats leaned over desks to shake hands with him. He remained in his seat but a few minutes and left to seek the more congenial atmosphere of the capitol grounds.

One of the most important factors in such a fight is to get the truth before the people each week. THE CAUCASIAN will do it, with your help.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Fair and Gentlemanly Speech.

Durham, N. C., June 9, '94.

MR. EDITOR:—I notice the attack made on you in the N.-O.-C., of Raleigh. The correspondent says that your speech was unfair and contemptible. The editor of that paper writes an editorial taking his cue from the correspondent that was bitter and unjust.

Now I want to say to the thousands of readers of THE CAUCASIAN that no man has ever been honored with a finer or more representative audience in this town. The Court House was litterly packed and it is a very large building. The audience was composed of a good representation from all classes of our citizens. You were applauded liberally when you entered the hall and all through your speech. I will not attempt to describe your speech, but all who heard you and all who have ever heard you, know that you made a strong and forcible presentation of your subject.

But I want to call especial attention to the fact that when you closed, that some of the most prominent business and professional men went forward and congratulated you upon your effort, and I have heard more than one say of a different political party from yourself, that it was a gentlemanly, dignified speech and fair to all sides. This is proof enough that the correspondent of the News-Observer did not reflect the sentiments of the people of Durham.

Rockingham County.

Acting under call of the State Ex. Com. of the People's party, I hereby call a convention of the People's party of Rockingham Co. to meet in Reidsville at the Court House on July 4th, to elect delegates to State, Congressional and Judicial Conventions. Also to celebrate the 2nd, Declaration of American Independence.

The department of gymnastics was under her supervision, and she made a most successful teacher. Mr. Goodwin is well and favorably known in the State as a gentleman of fine talent and ability. He was recently elected Superintendent of the State institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Morganton, and is one of the trustees of the State Normal and Industrial School. After the wedding ceremony, a reception will be given the bridal party at the residence of Dr. Chas. D. McIver, Mr. David Blair, of High Point, will be the groom's best man, and Miss Sadie Hirshinger, of Charlotte, maid of honor. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin will make their home in Morganton.

A ROUSING MEETING IN SWAIN.

Over Half of the People Meet at the Court House and Pass Ringing Resolutions in Favor of the People's Party.

The largest political meeting ever held in Swain county assembled at the court house to-day. After the adjournment of the morning session, Judge McIver kindly gave the court house to the people. The Cherokee Indian Brass Band 12 pieces, discoursed several inspiring airs, and the court house was literally packed and jammed with human beings. Mr. R. O. Patterson called the meeting to order, and in a few earnest words explained its object; he then called to the chair Geo. W. McCracken, who was elected to the office of Sheriff as a Populist in 1892, and deprived of the office by the Commissioners, although he, McCracken, carried every township in the county. Mr. McCracken, on request, gave a brief history of his election and of the conduct of the Board of Commissioners.

A. J. Franklin was appointed Secretary of the meeting.

On motion, a committee of three was appointed to draft resolutions The chair appointed Hon. W. H. Queen, who represented Swain county in the legislature, A. C. Patterson, and J. P. Gibson, who reported the following, which was unanimously adopted:

"The citizens of Swain county in mass meeting assembled including men of all shades of political opinion who are in favor of honest elections and local self-government, who feel oppressed by the hard times, and who are opposed to the administration that has brought such unparalleled distress upon the country, resolve as follows:

1. "We again denounce in unmeasured terms the act of two of the Commissioners of this county in unfairly, deceitfully and outrageously taking away the office of Sheriff from the choice of the voters, and giving said office to a man who was in no wise entitled thereto.

2. "The re-election on the first Monday in this month of the very men who perpetrated this outrage on our rights is enough to infuriate citizens who were already indignant, and proves clearly that our only hope is in repealing the system which permits with impunity such flagrant violations of the rights of the people.

3. "We unanimously demand the repeal of the undemocratic, unrepublican, unpopular, unparalleled, odious and iniquitous system of county government, which gives to unscrupulous court house rings the power which our ancestors decreed should rest with the people, and which the constitution of every free civilized state on earth except North Carolina gives to the people, and which the enlightened conscience of mankind demands should be exercised by the people at the ballot box.

4. "We are unalterably opposed to the administration of Grover Cleveland, and favor an absolute reversal of the politics which have filled the whole land with gloom and distress, and have brought millions of our countrymen to the verge of starvation.

5. "We believe it wise to make the same kind of political fight in 1894 that we made with such signal success in 1892.

"Resolved further, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to THE CAUCASIAN at Goldsboro, and to the Register at Asheville, with a request to publish the same.

W. H. QUEEN, Chm.
A. C. PATTERSON,
J. P. GIBSON."

While the committee were out, the Hon. J. M. Candler, of Jackson, and the Hon. Richmond Pearson, of Buncombe, addressed the crowd on the issues of the campaign. Each of the speakers received the most earnest and appreciative attention.

Three Good Things.

THE CAUCASIAN,
DR. MILES' NERVINE,
DR. MILES' HEART CURE.

It is with great pleasure and with considerable pride that we chronicle the large, yes enormous sale of Dr. Miles' Nervine and New Heart Cure These medicines have been advertised in our columns for some time, and like all other good things advertised there, have a large sale. The enormous demand for these medicines here is due to THE CAUCASIAN, supplemented by the great merit of the medicines themselves. This combination has made their sale phenomenal. Dr. Miles' Nervine is a scientific combination of the best and purest drugs by a remarkable process hitherto unknown. It contains no narcotics or opiates such as opium, morphine, choral, etcs., and is perfectly harmless if taken according to directions. It soothes, quiets and restores. It is a panacea for nervous people; it builds up, brings ambition to the discouraged, sleep, quiet refreshing sleep to the sleepless.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is a specific for heart disease. It has cured thousands of cases that have been given up by physicians. It heals, regulates and cures. These medicines are prescribed by hundreds of physicians. Why? Because they are superior to medicines the general practitioner can compound or formulate, he has not the time even if he had the ability and inclination to follow out special lines of experiment and investigation. He cannot afford to do this any more than he can afford to make the instruments he uses, or the clothes he wears. These medicines are the result of twenty years study and investigation by Dr. Miles the great specialist in Nervous and Heart Diseases, and we know them to be medicines of extraordinary merit. We therefore speak from the heart when we say three good things.

CAPT. KITCHIN TO SPEAK.

Capt. W. H. Kitchin will speak at Enfield on June 30th.

"THE DOGS AND THE FLEAS."

This is one of the most remarkable books of the century. It is a satire which, both in conception and execution has not been equaled. It is intensely humorous, illustrated by over eighty engravings, and among the characters represented in the drama of some 300 pages can be distinguished some of the most prominent men in the country.

"The Dogs and the Fleas" is a bold and truthful sketch of the present condition of society, wherein the workers are the dogs, and the bankers, bondholders, corporations and capitalists, both domestic and foreign, are the fleas, which are eternally sucking the blood of the dogs ank keeping the latter in a state of frenzied starvation. The work has called forth comment and praise from reformers on every hand and is having a phenomenal sale. The author can only be guessed at, as he prefers using the rather amusing pseudonym, "One of the Dogs," but the writer of this side-splitting illustration of the scribes, pharisees and hypocrites, the publicans and sinners of the present condition of society and the state, must be known sooner or later. It is the very book we have been wanting and has taken an immense hold. Uncle Tom's Cabin, which urged people to wipe out chattel slavery of another race than themselves, is very tame to this soul-reaching criticism of wage slavery and interest on bonds. We have read the work and can say in truth that no man can afford to miss it. Once get the book into your hands and you will not leave it until you have read the last page. One naturally falls into the use of many terms and figures of speech that abound with such profusion. You had better familiarize yourself with the book at once, it fits the times so perfectly.

Neither description nor quotation can do it justice.

It is the funniest story of the mental obfuscation of the people to the most staringly self-evident facts, and their ultimate awakening to the tremendous truism that two and two make four, that ever was written. It caustically hits off those twin humbuggers of the workingman, the Republican and Democratic parties. This unknown author has given to us the most utterly irreverent satire on the social, religious and political humbugs of the day that we have seen, and it will cut to the quick every worshipper of our many false gods who reads it. The book is bound to greatly help the reform movement in the coming campaign.

Paul Vandevoort has said: "It hits the right spot every time, exposing frauds and thieves and riddling the hypocrites and knaves. The author is master of a remarkable literary style, and I congratulate him on having produced one of the most striking books of the period."

We can safely say that the author has a thinker of great proportions and we feel proud of his effort. We should be glad to think that he has so happily covered the whole subject of reform from political humbug to religious hypocrisy.

The work has rapidly exhausted three editions. Published in paper covers at 50 cents; cloth, $1.00; and may be ordered from this office.

HON. TOM WATSON

Institution is a department called "International Exchange." It was created for the convenience, I suppose, of swapping American curiosities for foreign curiosities. Its chief aim is to make a good exchange of rare bugs and curious skeletons.

It only costs you $14,500 each year.

Then comes the Department of Ethnology of American Indians. Having killed nearly all the Indians, we are now consumed with a desire to study their ancient habits and history. Our forefathers burnt their towns, stole their lands and punched holes in them with bowie knives and rifle balls. Hence we are disposed to be very highly interested in digging up the bones and studying the race peculiarities of the men whom our ancestors destroyed.

It only costs you $40,000 per year to do it.

The Smithsonian Institution and branches cost you for the fiscal year ending June, 1892, the grand total of $311,000.

In 1893 it cost you pratically the same.

THE CAPITOL BUILDING.

At the first session of the Fifty-Second Congress the following sums were appropriated for the Capitol building.

For general repairs - -	$20,000
Repairs of heating apparatus	2,375
Improving ventilation and for improving the kitchen of the Senate restaurant	97,496
For Improving the Capitol Grounds - - - -	15,000
For the Capitol teraces -	8,000
Lighting the Capitol and Grounds - - - -	24,000
Engine house and stables	500

Thus $145,000 of your money, during the first session of one Congress, went to the keeping up of the Capitol building and grounds, exclusive of the large sums spent on furniture and interior fixtures and supplies. Those sums have already been given you from the reports of the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate.

The Fish Commission costs you in round numbers $300,000 per year.

The Inter-State Commerce Commission, $225,000.

The Coast and Geodetic Survey, $500,000.

Light House Establisment, $2,307,-000.

The Revenue Cutter Service costs you about one million dollars per year; the Life-Saving Service one million; the Geological Survey half a million.

PUBLIC PRINTING.

In the expenses of the Senate and the House, heretafore given, nothing has been said about the cost of printing books, reports, speeches, memorials, laws, decisions, etc.

Taking the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, you will find them itemized thus:

For salaries, materials, binding, and composition in the office of the Public Printer you spent in one fiscal year the enormous sum of $2,610,-500.00.

From June 30, 1892, up to March 3, 1893, I find that you spent in printing at Washington $2,497,000.-00.

And as I will show you hereafter, this huge sum was not enough and they took nearly half a million more.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,

As you know, is a small strip of National territory in which the city of Washington, our National Capitol, is situated.

It is supposed to be under the direct government of Congress. As a matter of fact it is governed by local bosses just as other cities are.

The inhabitants of the District of Columbia have no representation in Congress and have no vote upon National questions. The purpose of our forefatners was to have the Nation Capitol a sort of non-political affair where peace and quiet would reign, and the voice of faction would not be heard.

As a result of this peculiar condition of things Washington City considers itself a pohtical pet and takes all the privileges of a spoilt child of a great Nation.

You have to pay one half of the expenses of this wealthy city which is especially the home of millionaires.

Out of your taxes come one half of the sums spent upon streets, drains, public schools, police departments, fire departments, health departments, telegraph and telephone service, prisons and reformatories: support of deaf ann dumb, public charitie, militia for the District, expenses of the water department, and all the other items of cost of a city government.

It strikes one as being a very siular thing that the tax payers of this Republic should have to pay more than seventy thousand dollars per year for sweeping and sprinkling the streets of Washington, but it is a fact all the same.

The City of Washington, like all other cities has been shingled over with bonds by the bosses who fattened on the spoils, and I find that one million two hundred and thirteen dollars was appropriated by act of Congress of March 3, 1893, to pay for "interest and sinking fund on the funded debt, exclusive of water bonds."

The annual amount spent on the City of Washington is five and a half million dollars, in round numbers. You pay half of it.

Remember that this sum does not include the amounts already given for keeping up your public buildings and grounds in Washington.

This huge outlay is in addition to those items.

The richest man in Washington can send his children to school with the satisfaction of knowing that the general taxpayers of the land must pay one half of the expense.

You pay for half the cost of the trees planted, of the streets graded, of the pavements laid, of the jails built, of the asylums and hospitals and refuges. You pay one half of the expense of lighting the city, maintaining its police, and feeding its poor. You pay half of the expense of the Washington Market Masters, coroners, town commissioners, city attorneys, city treasurer, school teachers, school books, janitors, watchmen and all the other thousand and one hangers on of a municipal service.

All the expenses herein mentioned are in relation to Washington City itself.

In addition to the parks you maintain in the capitol, there is the Yellowstone Park, in the far Northwest, which costs you $75,000 per year; and the Chicamauga Park in Tennessee which costs you from $200,-000 to $250,000 per year.

Reflect upon all these items and then decide whether you are satisfied with the manner your money is being spent.

The questions concern you all, for each of you, however poor, pays his full share of the taxes out of which these great sums are spent.

The National taxes being so laid that you pay them when you buy articles of house furniture, and implements of labor (such as plows, axes, chains, hoes, etc.,) there is no citizen who is not deeply interested.

Your National taxes now reach seven dollars per head, every year for every man, woman and child in the Union.

Unless you examine into the accounts and have this wastefulness stopped, your taxes will continually grow heavier—while you grow less able to pay them.

IX.

That night, or very early next morning, there was pandemonium at the barracks. It was clear, still, beautiful. A soft April wind was drifting up from the lower coast, laden with the perfume of sweet olive and orange blossoms. Mrs. Cram, with one or two lady friends and a party of officers had been chatting in low tone upon their gallery until after eleven, but elsewhere about the moonlit quadrangle all was silence when the second relief was posted. Far at the rear of the walled inclosure, where, in deference to the manners and customs of war as observed in the good old days whereof our seniors tell, the sutler's establishment was planted within easy hailing distance of the guard-house, there was still the sound of modified revelry by night, and poker and whisky punch had gathered their devotees in the grimy parlors of Mr. Finkbein, and here the belated ones tarried until long after midnight, as most of them were bachelors and had no better halves, as had Doyle, to fetch them home "out of the wet." Cram and his lieutenants, with the exception of Doyle, were never known to patronize this establishment, whatsoever they might do outside. They had separated before midnight, and little Pierce, after his customary peep into Waring's preserves, had closed the door, gone to his own room to bed and to sleep. Ferry, as battery officer of the day, had made the rounds of the stables and gun shed about one o'clock, and had encountered Capt. Kinsey, of the infantry, coming in from his long tramp through the dew-wet field, returning from the inspection of the sentry-post at the big magazine.

"No news of poor Sam yet, I suppose?" said Kinsey, sadly, as the two came strolling in together through the rear gate.

"Nothing whatever," was Ferry's answer. "We cannot even form a conjecture, unless he, too, has been murdered. Think of there being a warrant out for his arrest—for him, Sam Waring!"

"Well," said Kinsey, "no other conclusion could be well arrived at, unless that poor brute Doyle did it in a drunken row. Pills says he never saw a man so terror-stricken as he seems to be. He's afraid to leave him, really, and Doyle's afraid to be alone—thinks the old woman may get in."

"She has no excuse for coming, captain," said Ferry. "When she told Cram she must see her husband to-day, that she was out of money and starving, the captain surprised her by handing her fifty dollars, which is much more than she'd have got from Doyle. She took it, of course, but that isn't what she wanted. She wants to get at him. She has money enough."

"Yes, that woman's a terror, Ferry. Old Mrs. Murtagh, wife of my quartermaster sergeant, has been in the army twenty years, and says she knew her well—knew all her people. She comes from a tough lot, and they had a bad reputation in Texas in the old days. Doyle's a totally different man since she turned up, Cram tells me. Hello! here's 'Pills the Less,'" he suddenly exclaimed, as they came opposite the west gate leading to the hospital. "How's your patient, Doc?"

"Well, he's sleeping at last. He seems worn out. It's the first time I've left him; but I'm used up and want a few hours' sleep. There isn't anything to drink in the room, even if he should wake, and Jim is sleeping or lying there by him."

"Oh, he'll do all right now, I reckon," said the officer of the day, cheerfully. "Go and get your sleep. The old woman can't get at him unless she bribes my sentries or rides the air on a broomstick, like some other old witches I've read of." Ferry sleeps in the adjoining room, anyhow, so he can look out for her. Good night, Doc." And so, on they went, glancing upward at the dim light just showing through the window-blinds in the gable end of Doyle's quarters, and halting at the foot of the stairs.

"Come over and have a pipe with me, Ferry," said the captain. "It's too beautiful a night to turn in. I want to talk to you about Waring, anyhow. This thing weighs on my mind."

"Done with you, for an hour anyhow!" said Ferry. "Just wait a minute till I run up and get my baccy."

Presently down came the young fellow again, meerschaum in hand, the moonlight glinting on his slender figure, so trim and jaunty in the battery dress. Kinsey looked him over with a smile of soldierly approval and a whimsical comment on the contrast between the appearance of this young artillery sprig and that of his own stout personality, clad as he was in a bulging blue flannel sack coat, only distinguishable in cut and style from civilian garb by its having brass buttons and a pair of tarnished old shoulder straps. Ferry was a swell. His shell jacket fitted like wax. The Russian shoulder knots of twisted gold were of the handsomest make. The riding breeches, top boots and spurs were such that even Waring could not criticise. His saber gleamed in the moonbeams, and Kinsey's old leather-covered sword looked dingy by contrast. His belt fitted trim and taut, and was polished as his boot-tops; Kinsey's sank down over the left hip, and was worn brown. The sash Ferry sported as battery officer of the day was draped, West Point fashion, over the shoulder and around the waist, and accurately knotted and looped; Kinsey's old war-worn crimson net was slung higgledy-piggledy over his broad chest.

"What swells you fellows are, Ferry!" he said, laughingly, as the youngster came dancing down. "Even old Doyle gets out here in his scarlet plume occasionally and puts us doughboys to shame. What's the use in trying to make such a rig as ours look soldierly? If it were not for the brass buttons our coats would make us look like parsons and our hats like monkeys. As for this undress, all that can be said in its favor is you can't spoil it even by sleeping out on the levee in it, as I am sometimes tempted to do. Let's go out there now."

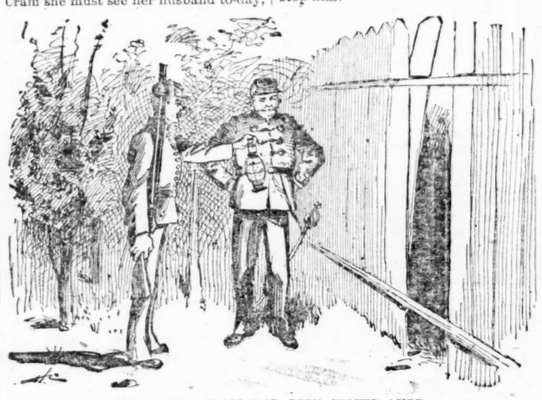
It was perhaps quarter of two when they took their seats on the wooden bench under the trees, and, lighting their pipes, gazed out over the broad sweeping flood of the Mississippi, gleaming like a silvered shield in the moonlight. Far across at the opposite shore the low line of orange groves and plantation houses and quarters was merged in one long streak of gloom, relieved only at intervals by twinkling light. Farther up-stream, like dozing sea-dogs, the fleet of monitors lay moored along the bank, with the masts and roofs of Algiers dimly outlined against the crescent sweep of lights that marked the levee of the great southern metropolis, still prostrate from the savage buffeting of the war, yet so soon to rouse from lethargy, resume her sway, and, stretching forth her arms, to draw once again to her bosom the wealth and tribute, tenfold augmented, of the very heart of the nation, until, mistress of the commerce of a score of states, she should rival even New York in the volume of her trade. Below them, away to the east towards English Turn, rolled the tawny flood, each ripple and eddy and swirling pool crested with silver—the twinkling lights at Chalmette barely distinguishable from dim, low-hanging stars. Midway the black hulk of some big ocean voyager was forging slowly, steadily towards them, the red light of the port side already obscured, the white and green growing with every minute more and more distinct, and, save the faint rustle of the leaves overhead, murmuring under the touch of the soft, southerly night wind, the splash of wavelet against the wooden pier, and the measured footfall of the sentry on the flagstone walk in front of the sally-port, not a sound was to be heard.

For awhile they smoked in silence, enjoying the beauty of the night, though each was thinking only of the storm that swept over the scene the Sunday previous and of the tragedy that was borne upon its wings. At last Kinsey shook himself together.

"Ferry, sometimes I come out here for a quiet smoke and think. Did it ever occur to you what a fearful force, what illimitable power, there is sweeping by us here night after night with never a sound?"

"Oh, you mean the Mississip," said Ferry, flippantly. "It would be a case of mops and brooms, I fancy, if she were to bust through the bank and sweep us out into the swamps."

"Exactly! that's in case she broke loose, as you say; but even when in the shafts, as she is now, between the levees, how long would it take her to sweep a fellow from here out into the gulf, providing nothing interposed to stop him?"



WHERE TWO SLATS HAD BEEN SHOVED ASIDE.

"Matter of simple mathematical calculation," said Ferry, practically. "They say it's an eight-mile current easy out there in the middle where she's booming. Look at that barrel scooting down yonder. Now, I'd lay a fiver I could cut loose from here at reveille and shoot the passes before taps and never pull a stroke. It's less than eighty miles down to the forts."

"Well, then, a skiff like that that old Anatole's blaspheming about losing wouldn't take very long to ride over that route, would it?" said Kinsey, reflectively.

"No, not if allowed to slide. But somebody'd be sure to put out and haul it in as a prize—flotsam and whatyou-may-call-'em. You see these old niggers all along here with their skiffs tacking on to every bit of drift wood that's worth having."

"But, Ferry, do you think they'd venture out in such a storm as Sunday last?—think anything could live in it short of a decked ship?"

"No, probably not. Certainly not Anatole's boat."

"Well, that's just what I'm afraid of, and what Cram and Reynolds dread."

"Do they? Well, so far as that storm's concerned, it would have blown it down stream until it came to the big bend below here to the east. Then, by rights, it ought to have blown against the left bank. But every inch of it has been scouted all the way to quarantine. The whole river was filled with drift, though, and it might have been wedged in a lot of logs and swept out anyhow. Splendid ship, that! Who is she, do you suppose?"

The great black hull with its lofty tracery of masts and spars was now just about opposite the barracks, slowly and majestically ascending the stream.

"One of those big British freight steamers that moor there below the French market, I reckon. They seldom come up at night unless it's in the full of the moon, and even then they move with the utmost caution. See, she's slowing up now."

"Hello! Listen! What's that?" exclaimed Ferry, starting to his feet.

A distant, muffled cry. A distant shot. The sentry at the sally-port dashed through the echoing vault, then bang! came the loud roar of his piece, followed by the yell of:

"Fire! fire! The guard!"

With one spring Ferry was down the levee and darted like a deer across the road, Kinsey lumbering heavily after. Even as he sped through the stone-flagged way, the hoarse roar of the drum at the guard-house, followed instantly by the blare of the bugle from the battery quarters, sounded the stirring alarm. A shrill, agonized female voice was madly screaming for help. Guards and sentries were rushing to the scene, and flames were bursting from the front window of Doyle's quarters. Swift though Ferry ran, others were closer to the spot. Half a dozen active young soldiers, members of the infantry guard, had sprung to the rescue. When Ferry dashed up to the gallery he was just in time to stumble over a writhing and prostrate form, to help extinguish the blazing clothing of another, to seize his water bucket and douse its contents over a third—one yelling, the others stupefied by smoke—or something. In less time than it takes to tell it, daring fellows had ripped down the blazing shades and shutters, tossed them to the parade beneath, dumped a heap of soaked and smoking bedding out of the rear windows, splashed a few bucketfuls of water about the rocking room, and the fire was out. But the doctors were working their best to bring back the spark of life to two senseless forms, and to still the shrieks of agony that burst from the seared and blistered lips of Bridget Doyle.

While willing hands bore these scorched semblances of humanity to neighboring rooms and tender-hearted women hurried to add their ministering touch, and old Braxton ordered the excited garrison back to quarters and bed, he, with Cram and Kinsey and Ferry, made prompt examination of the premises. On the table two whisky bottles, one empty, one nearly full, that Dr. Potts declared were not there when he left at one. On the mantel a phial of chloroform, which was also not there before. But a towel soaked with the stifling contents lay on the floor by Jim's rude pallet, and a handkerchief half soaked, half consumed, was on the chair which had stood by the bedside among the fragments of an overturned kerosene lamp.

A quick examination of the patients showed that Jim, the negro, had been chloroformed and was not burned at all, that Doyle was severely burned and had probably inhaled flames, and that the woman was crazed with drink, terror and burns combined. It took the efforts of two or three men and the influence of powerful opiates to quiet her. Taxed with negligence or complicity on the part of the sentry, the sergeant of the guard repudiated the idea, and assured Col. Braxton that it was an easy matter for anyone to get either in or out of the garrison without encountering the sentry, and taking his lantern led the way to the hospital grounds by a winding footpath among the trees to a point in the high white picket fence where two slats had been shoved aside. Anyone coming along the street without could pass far beyond the ken of the sentry at the west gate, and slip in with the utmost ease, and once inside all that was necessary was to dodge possible reliefs and patrols. No sentry was posted at the gate through the wall that separated the garrison proper from the hospital grounds. Asked why he had not reported this, the sergeant smiled and said there were a dozen others just as convenient, so what was the use? He did not say, however, that he and his fellows had recourse to them night after night.

It was three o'clock when the officers' families got fairly settled down again and back to their beds, and the silence of night once more reigned over Jackson barracks. One would suppose that such a scene of terror and excitement was enough, and that now the trembling, frightened women might be allowed to sleep in peace; but it was not to be. Hardly had one of their number closed her eyes, hardly had all the flickering lights, save those at the hospital and guardhouse, been downed again, when the strained nerves of the occupants of the officers' quadrangle were jumped into mad jangling once more and all the barracks aroused a second time, and this, too, by a woman's shrick of horror.

Mrs. Conroy, a delicate, fragile little body, wife of a junior lieutenant of infantry occupying a set of quarters in the same building with, but at the opposite end from, Pierce and Waring, was found lying senseless at the head of the gallery stairs.

When revived, amid tears and tremblings and incoherent exclamations she declared that she had gone down to the big ice-chest on the ground-floor to get some milk for her nervous and frightened child and was hurrying noiselessly up the stairs again—the only means of communication between the first and second floors—when, face to face, in front of his door, she came upon Mr. Waring, or his ghost; that his eyes were fixed and glassy; that he did not seem to see her even when he spoke, for speak he did. His voice sounded like a moan of anguish, she said, but the words were distinct: "Where is my knife? Who has taken my knife?"

And then little Pierce, who had helped to raise and carry the stricken woman to her room, suddenly darted out on the gallery and ran along to the door he had closed four hours earlier. It was open. Striking a match, he hurried through into the chamber beyond, and there, face downward upon the bed, lay his friend and comrade Waring, moaning like one in the delirium of fever.

FARMERS' COLUMN.

PIGS INSTEAD OF CALVES ON A DAIRY FARM.

As far as my experience goes in growing pigs for money by the side of calves for money, there is more money in the pigs than in the calves. A pig grown along with a calf last year, during the warm months—the calf a few days older than the pig, both being fed three times a day on sour milk with a handful of corn-meal—went far ahead of the calf financially. When the pig was six months old he weighed 250 pounds, and was fat. Fresh pork then brought 7 cents per pound. I could take $10 for the calf when six months old at 7 cents per pound, would have brought $7.50 more than the calf when six months old. During the six months the calf ate twice as much milk as the pig, besides eating all the hay he wanted. I cold have raised two pigs on what it cost to raise the calf. So I lost $25 by growing a calf instead of growing two pigs.—(A. F. D.)

Ideal Fowls For The Farm.

A half-dozen persons might mention as many different breeds of poultry as just filling the bill of ideal fowls for the farm, but among the half-dozen it would be hard to pick another variety whose good points—practical points—would outnumber the good points of the breed represented in the illustration accompanying this—the White Plymouth Rock. They are hardy, quiet, quick growers and good layers. They are splendid fowls for the table and for market poultry, and the plumage makes dressing them a much easier matter than the dressing of colored fowls. It is a matter of fact, however, that the barred Plymouth Rocks enjoy a much wider dissemination and a much greater apparent popularity than the white variety—for just what reason it would perhaps be difficult to state. There seems to be a prejudice against white fowls on the part of many farmers, on the ground that they are less hardy than those with colored plumage, but there is no proof forthcoming to support such a prejudice. The white Plymouth Rocks are certainly hardy, and afford most desirable poultry stock for the farm.—(Webb Donnell.)

A Southern Truck Section.

Along the Wilmington and Weldon Railroad, between Wilmington, N. C., and Goldsboro, N. C., a distance of ninety miles, lies one of the most successful trucking sections in the South. It is destined to become the foremost on account of the cheapness of lands, regularity of seasons and variety of fruits and vegetables grown. The land is a sandy loam, with a gently rolling surface, varying in elevation from 30 to 150 feet above the sea level. Suitable lands may be had at $2 per acre within easy reach of depot. As to the seasons, we have failed only once in growing a crop of strawberries in twelve years. Asparagus, peas, beans, cucumbers, tomatoes, cabbage, strawberries, grapes, and, in fact, every fruit add vegetable grown for market flourishes. All kinds of flowers and shrubbery also are grown under contract for Northern dealers. We have one of the finest climates in the world. Our setion is protected by the Alleghany Mountains from the chilling blasts of the northwest, and on the East the Gulf Stream almost touches our shores, sending its warm winds many miles inland.—(R. Cooked Food For Pigs.

Farmers that are in the habit of feeding their pigs on corn all winter would be surprised if they would resolve to give their pigs a feed of good warm slop at noon for one month, and I am of the opinion at the end of that time they will conclude to feed them one more month, as by that time there will be considerable improvement in the little curly fellows. Some may say, "what will we make slop out of—no money to buy mill feed, and the cows all dry?" I will say to those thinking that way, grind your wheat. We all know the time has been when a little wheat brought lots of money, but nowadays it takes lots of wheat to bring a little money. Grind your wheat and make it into warm slop and feed the fall pigs at noon, and you will find that a little wheat will bring you lots of money again. I will my way of making slop so as to have it ready when noon comes, and if any one wishes to try it, all right, as there is no patent on the way. All it requires is a little nerve and hustle. I have an old house with a fireplace that no one lives in. The first thing I do of a morning, after the fires are all made and my wife is getting breakfast, is to take my lantern and fill my kettle, which hangs in the old fireplace, with water, then start a fire, and by the time breakfast is over the water is hot. I then put the water in a barrel and pour in enough feed to make a good thick slop, and cover up tight, and when noon comes do not forget to feed. If you are not fortunate enough to have the old fireplace, persuade your good wife to let you have the stove boiler and set it on your cook stove and prepare the food. If your good wife has not too much temper she will be very likely to let you use the boiler, provided you promise her enough water to wash the dishes.—(Indiana Farmer.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT ON A GIRL.

The Strange Story of Her Uncle George Mills.

(Special to Richmond Dispatch.)

Raleigh, N. C., June 21, '94.

Three miles from Apex, in this county, yesterday afternoon George Mills and his niece, Miss Wimberly, left her home to go to a neighbor's house for some flowers. When a mile from home Mills says they were attacked by two men, who assaulted Miss Wimberly, and ordered him to leave, which he did; but, instead of returning immediately and notifying the girl's parents, he said nothing of the matter until midnight. Search was made for the girl, and at daylight she was found in an unoccupied house, her head cut and her skull fractured in several places. She is alive, but unconscious, and the physicians says she cannot live. A special to the Eveneng Press says blood has been found on Mill's shirt.

Later—Miss Wimberly is still alive but unconscious.

Mills has been arrested on suspicion and taken to jial at Raleigh.
